

Mission Websites to get you started . . . .

<http://www.radlhammer.com/pictures/missions.htm>

This site has some excellent pictures that were taken by Udo Radlhammer. On the main page there is a map of California that shows where all of the missions are located. If you click on the name of a mission, it will take you to a page with the mission picture(s) and a little information about the mission.

<http://www.calandscapephotography.com/missions.html>

This site has four pages of awesome pictures of the missions, which were taken by John Pelafigue.

<http://missions.bgmm.com/>

A map of California will show you on this website where your mission is located. Click on that spot and a history will come up of your mission, along with a picture.

<http://www.ca-missions.org>

When you go to this website, click on the illustrated glossary, this will give you pictures and descriptions on anything having to do with mission life. The glossary will show and describe interesting artifacts from each mission.

<http://www.thecaliforniamissions.com/index.html>

This site offers visual tours of each of the missions, so you can see first-hand what each site looks like.

<http://teacher.scholastic.com/researchtools/researchstarters/missions/>

This Scholastic website offers numerous additional research sites to visit in order to complete your California Mission Report.

<http://www.missionscalifornia.com/>

The California Missions Resource Center is a comprehensive and unique resource for historical information on the twenty-one California Missions.

<http://www.missionsofca.com/>

This site is about the mission kits you can buy at the store to create your own mission model. It contains information on how to build your model, how to add details, and how it should look when completed.

<http://factcards.califa.org/mis/mismenu/html>

This site takes you to the fact cards we use in the classroom

<http://factcards.califa.org/mli/mlimenu.html>

This is the same site for the fact cards, but takes you right to information about life at the California Missions

<http://californias-missions.org>

The Spanish Missions of California – a resource website for teachers and students in their study of the California Missions

<http://pics.tech4learning.com>

Pics4Learning is a safe, free image library for education. Teachers and students can use the copyright-friendly photos & images for classrooms, multimedia projects, websites, videos, portfolios, or any projects in an educational setting